OKLAHOMA TIRE CONSTRUCTION CO. 202 W. Second St. Walnut 309 F. C. ELLSWORTH, Manager. Novelty has a charm for everyone, and in these grayly commonplace times to find oneself immersed in a maelstrom of eastern deviltry, with a group of scientific murderers in pur-suit of a bloody Moslem relic, and unexpectedly to be made a trustee of that dangerous curiosity, has a certain charm for the adventurous. I knew that Edward Deeping had looted one of the sacred shippers of Mohammed from its ancient resting place and I knew that a mysterious fanatic known as Hassan of Aleppo had uprisen in judgment upon him. I knew that the rash act of the celebrated Orientalist had caused London to be invaded by members of an organization, the hashishin, dating back to pre-Crusading times. I knew that many of those who had touched the slipper had suffered the ancient Moslem pen-severed. Now in silence we stood round that table at New Scotland yard and watched, as though we expected it to move, the ghastly "clue" which lay there. It was a shriveled human hand, and about the thumb and forefinger there still dryly hung a fragment of lint which had bandaged a jagged wound. On one of the shrunken fingers was a ring set with a large opal, Inspector Bristol broke the oppresse

alty, had had their offending hand

ve silence. "You see, sir," he said, addressing the commissioner, "this marks a new complication in the case. Up to this week although, unfortunately, we had made next to no progress, the thing was straightforward enough. A band of Eastern murderers, working along lines quite novel to Europe, were con-cealed somewhere in London. We knew that much. They murdered Professor Deeping, but failed to recover the slipper. They mutilated mysteriously everyone who touched it. The best man in the department, working night and day, failed to effect a single arrest. In spite of the mysterious activity of Hassan of Aleppo the slipper was safely lodged in the British Antiquarian museum."

The commissioner nooded thought-"There is no doubt," continued Brisfully. tol, "that the hashishin were watching the museum. Mr. Cavanagh here"-he nodded in my direction-"saw Hassan himself lurking in the neighborhood. We took every precaution; observed the greatest secrecy; but, in spite of it all, a constable who touched the accursed slipper lost his right hand, Then the slipper was taken." "The Yard," resumed Bristol slowly, "had information that Earl Dexter, the cleverest crook in America, was in England. He was seen in the Museum; and, the night following, the slipper was stolen. Then outside the

He pointed to the severed hand. No one spoke for Froment. The new problem," said the commissioner, "is this: who took the slipper: Dexter or Hassan of Aleppo?"

place I found-that!"

"That's it, sir," agreed Bristol, "Dexter had two passages booked in the Oceanic; but he didn't sail with her, and-that's his hand!"

"You say he has not been traced?" asked the commissioner. "No doctor known to the Medical association," replied Bristol, "is attend-ing him! He's not in any of the hospitals. He has completely vanished. The conclusion is obvious!"

"The evident deduction," I said, "is that Dexter stole the slipper from the Museum-God knows with what purpose-and that Hassan or Aleppo recovered it from him-" You think we shall next hear of Earl Dexter from the river police? suggested Bristol. Personally," replied the commissioner, "I agree with Mr. Cavanagh. I think Dexter is dead and it is very probable that Hassan and company are already homeward bound with the slip-

With all my heart I hoped that he might be right, but an intuition was with me crying that he was wrong, that many bloody deeds would be committed ere the sacred slipper should return to the East.

per of the Prophet."

The manner in which we next heard of the whereabouts of the Prophet's slipper was utterly unforeseen, wildly One evening as I sat at work in my chambers, with the throb of busy Fleet street and its thousand familiar sounds floating in to me through the open windows, my telephone rang. It was Bristol who had rung me up, and upon very strange business. "A development at last!" he said; "but at present I don't know what to make of it. Can you come down now?"

"Where are you speaking from?"
"From the Waterloo Road—a delightful neighborhood. I shall be glad if you can meet me at the entrance to Wyatt's buildings in half an hour." (To Be Continued.)

McDaniel Finds Clue to Slayer

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., Jan. 15.-Oscar D. McDaniel, former prosecuting attorney of Buchanan county, today obtained from Circuit Judge Utz the commission of deputy sheriff, admittedly for use in running down a clue to the whereabouts of the man who murdered Mrs. McDaniel her last summer.

McDaniel, although declining to say directly he has a strong clue as to the slayer's identity, admitted he intends to go to Topeka, Kan, this week accompanied by another man, presumably a detective.

In applying for the commission, Me-Daniel stated that he might find it neeessary to make an arrest.
